Noam Chomsky on the 2008 election

ELECTIONS & CHANGE

DVD / 35 minutes total: 26 min. talk plus 9 min. for Q&A and intro

In this short talk in Boston on November 19, 2008, Noam Chomsky discusses the historic U.S. election results, comparing the democratic systems of Latin America (where left movements have been putting their candidates in office) with the public relations-managed extravaganzas here (intended for a passive citizenry), drawing lessons on how we can best create progressive "real change."
